Q: Bootstrapping multiple RDBMS in a single Docker image Can we bootstrap multiple PostgreSQL and MySQL in a single Docker image? For example, the Postgres image bootstraps itself, and MySQL from running Dockerfile's /mysql base image. A: This is possible, but not really convenient. Since Postgres 11, a driver is included to use Docker's built-in volume for persistence during an offline install. This allows to run Postgres without any installation steps or having to rely on a bootstrap or centos base image.
