Q: What is this herb called and where can I find it? I bought a bunch of this at a market in Montreal, but when I saw it this morning, I couldn't remember the name. So I took a picture, and asking a friend they said, "tait chou." I've tried searching online for a time, but I don't know a proper name, and the closest I found is also just tait. A: That's Golomia capitata (Capitata vine). From The fruit are red and round with green rims. They are harvested when they are black. The green/red coloration is caused by a bixin-type anthocyanin. —Antoni Vigna and Ignazio Bartoli, "Gum Resin Collection of the Plant World and New Trends of Flavonoid Research, Biotechnological Insights" Somehow they found out it was the Kapitata vine and made this clear photo because it was the red round fruit (the question wasn't sufficient). About 12:15 p.m. Monday, two armed individuals reportedly entered a Walmart on the 25000 block of southbound U.S. Highway 29 in southwest Oklahoma City and began a pursuit of a stolen vehicle. Advertisement An employee called 911 to report two men in the parking lot were chasing a Toyota Avalon. The alleged thieves drove off in a Dodge pickup truck and continued north through the parking lot and north on U.S. Highway 75. No arrests have been made, but the Oklahoma Highway Patrol is investigating the incident. in a 3. The only difference with this time is that it was now in your main routine. Remember now, it's OK to change things, but don't do it half-hearted. You should add a little bit of fluff to your program that says: done. and your routine should work until you want
