FIFA is the world's most popular football game franchise. When EA first released FIFA in 1991, it was designed to provide an authentic football experience and bring players closer to the sport. In the 19 years since, FIFA has been used to entertain millions of players around the world, and it remains the only football simulation that people of all ages love. FIFA is the franchise that's more than a sports game; it's a sport that's more than a game. Today, FIFA is enjoyed by over 1.4 billion people worldwide and sells more than 700 million units a year. FIFA continues to be the industry benchmark for innovation and creativity. From the team-based gameplay of FIFA Ultimate Team™ to the never-ending excitement of the new FIFA World Cup™ series, FIFA continues to be a fresh and dynamic experience that people love. FIFA's motto, "The World's Game," was our inspiration in developing FIFA 20. The game remains grounded in the reality of the game to keep players immersed, but there's also a whole world of innovation going on. Rabbits, pigs, planes, and tanks Players can now take control of their favourite teams like never before, with more than 60 licensed leagues to choose from. Real-world clubs such as FC Barcelona, Chelsea, Tottenham Hotspur, and Manchester United have joined the game. The new Ball Physics engine and True Player Motion, developed for the last two generations of consoles, is the foundation of our goal of bringing the experience of real-world football to life in-game. New camera angles and ball physics system Players will notice a completely new camera system, with an expanded viewpoint and more natural camera direction. The new ball physics system is focused on building up speed and flicks it through the air. The new underlying building blocks allow for more nuanced gameplay at the fine-grained level of the ball. These systems are the foundation of the new Pro Player 2.0 engine, a new graphics engine that can load large amounts of data. The engine also works with many new technologies, including DirectX Raytracing, to drive the latest visuals. We're proud to announce the next-gen engine is already available to select teams in FIFA Ultimate Team. This gives clubs the option of choosing between next-gen visuals and all gameplay improvements.
