Wondershare Dr Fone 10.5.0 Crack is the ultimate data recovery app for your laptop. Tuesday, February 16, 2017 Tuesday Thought: Depression and Self-Care I was recently watching a friend's TV series on depression, and it really made me think about the links between depression and self-care. For someone struggling with a major depressive episode, it can feel like no matter what you do, you'll just end up sinking a little deeper. It's important to remember, however, that we only become depressed because we're not taking care of ourselves. Most people are more concerned about depression as a purely negative emotion (eg, "I feel depressed" rather than "I'm depressed"). It's not until something even slightly negative happens that we can experience a major depressive episode. The stress of even the tiniest incident can become amplified into the overwhelming sense of darkness we describe as depression. Many of the same basic things that make depression easier to live with, also make it easier to live with. Sleep deprivation and cognitive impairment are among the most obvious symptoms of depression. But there are plenty of other markers as well. The first thing we need to do when we feel ourselves starting to get depressed, is to ask: Am I getting too much sleep? Am I getting enough food? Am I using my energy efficiently? Is there more stress in my life? Am I eating unhealthy food? Am I eating all the time? Am I doing the things I want to do? Am I exercising? Am I socializing? Am I getting enough sunshine? Am I socializing with the right people? Do I have the right people in my life? I think we can all remember times when we were depressed and ate nothing but
